The 8th edition of the Colombo International Maritime and Logistics Conference is being held at a crucial juncture for the international maritime and logistics industry. Current global trading conditions will be a key focus of the conference, which brings together participants and speakers from across the world. The event is organised as a high-level forum with active participation from South Asia and other regions.

Sri Lankan ports and the maritime and logistics sectors will play a significant role as the region expands its trade and investments. The conference will promote Sri Lanka as a regional hub.

I wish the conference every success.
